In light of the twin phenomena of an increasing religiously diverse U.S. population and the incessant increase in globalization, it has become imperative to prepare U.S. business students to deal with the impact of different religious beliefs and practices on business and economics.